Employing a distinctive theatrical visual approach, crafted to mirror the bees' unique universe, she invites viewers to delve into the mesmerizing world of these extraordinary creatures. As a devoted conservationist, Kathrin's inspiration for QUEENS sprang from a genuine desire to shed light on and pay homage to the profound beauty and irreplaceable role of bees within our delicate ecosystem.

4pm_stroll uncovers hidden aspects of everyday objects nestled in the suburban streets and prompts us to reconsider our connection to the immediate surroundings. Why do we often chase after grandeur while neglecting what is right at our feet? These revelations serve as a reminder of our existence amidst the whirlwind of daily life. This exhibition embraces the artistry found within the ordinary, inviting us to pause, reflect, and see poetry in the seemingly banal.

CARETA, WHO ARE YOU?

DIEGO RIBEIRO BARBOSA

Careta, who are you? explores the power of hybrid cultural representations, drawing from African-Brazilian popular culture and mythology. Through photography, Diego Barbosa brings to life these trickster characters dressed in costumes built through craftwork reminiscent of the same techniques used to make the costumes in Brazilian popular carnival festivals. Crossing the oceans, the Caretas want to eat at these new crossroads, mixing symbols and blurring cultural borders.

NIU GOLD MOUNTAIN (2024)

ALL MY FRIENDS

The Migrant Diaspora is often defined by the narrative of the search for a better life, an experience shared by Asian and Pasifika immigrants to Aotearoa. Niu Gold Mountain brings these histories together. Chinese immigrants sought their "New Gum San" in the gold mines, and Pasifika immigrants searched for their "Land of Milk & Honey". All My Friends explores these concepts in the present day. What are the aspirations of this generation's Asian and Pasifika artists? What do they see as their Niu Gold Mountain?

Kingdom Come is an exploration and tribute to the themes and subjects of Karangahape Road nightlife, portraying the humans that make it up while parodying it in a tongue in cheek way with religious imagery of mythical angels, heaven and hell. Exploring the idea that heaven and hell are subjective constructs that are created by us on earth.

NO. 28

ZAHRA SALARNIA

Zahra Salarnia's exhibition, No. 28, is a multichannel installation showcasing the fragmentary and fading remains of artist's childhood memories. Within the interplay of discrete pictures lies a poignant narrative—a reflection of innocent childhood life in a remote, peaceful environment, juxtaposed against the political affairs of post-revolutionary Iran. No. 28 encapsulates the dichotomies inherent in the artist's early life experiences, provoking contemplation on the convergence of private and public spheres within memory.

DON CHOOI

Mulled Spaces reflects on the artist's dual identity as an Asian immigrant and an older gay man in Aotearoa, exploring the anxieties of aging and belonging within the LGBTQ+ community. These murmured landscapes speak of 'presence', 'connectedness' and 'space' – searching for a want of belonging whilst contemplating on an idealised past.

New Zealand-born Samoan and Tongan artists respond to the 1970s Dawn Raids in Aotearoa. Their work challenges and educates on a dark part of our history.
